Author: Voisin (Patrick)

Abstract: Ahmadou Kourouma wanted his own room that he would call home in the big house of Molière's language. But he doesn't dwell in French literature. He was sentenced to dwell in book shelf number 846 which is reserved to Francophone African Literature... of commitment most of the time. Kourouma's works definitely show his poetical concern. So, some day, will Kourouma be entitled to belong to French literature without any further restrictive provision?
