

La langue des troubadours, origine de la langue française ?

(Pasquier, Fauchet, Vigenère, Rabelais)

Publication type: Article from a collective work

Collective work: La Réception des troubadours en Languedoc et en France XVIe-XVIIIe siècle

Author: Demonet (Marie-Luce)

Abstract: Scholars like Claude Fauchet, Blaise de Vigenère and Etienne Pasquier support the hypothesis that the French language has its roots in Occitan when we know that Rabelais had already shown some interest for meridional languages. They imagine this language as being an expressive and plausible ancestral idiom.
