Author: Bertaux-d'Orgeville (Rémy)

Abstract: We considered it interesting to imagine that Beckett may have made the person of Christ a central figure of Texts for Nothing, since he was assuredly tormented all his life by this man named Jesus, who was both God and man, God made man, maybe to the point of not knowing himself if he were more one than the other, if he knew who the other was. Beckett imagines. Beckett questions himself.
